1 I. Defense Motion in Limine No. 1: The Court Should Deny Defendant's Motion to Exclude 2 Highly Relevant Evidence About the Super Bowl Rejection Campaign Because It Goes to 3 the Nature of the Bargain

4 Andrade makes two incorrect claims about AML Bitcoin's Super Bowl rejection 5 campaign. First, he claims that the Super Bowl rejection campaign does not go to the "nature of 6 the bargain" in the charged fraud scheme. Def. Marcus Andrade's Mots. in Limine ##1-7 (Dkt.
 7 452) ("Def. MILs"), at 4 (quoting United States v. Milheiser, 98 F.4th 935, 944 (9th Cir. 2024)).
 8 Second, Andrade argues that evidence of the Super Bowl rejection campaign should be excluded 9 under Federal Rules of Evidence 401 and 403.

10 The Court should deny Andrade's motion because the Super Bowl rejection campaign 11 goes directly to the quality of the investments made by investor-victims investing in AML 12 Bitcoin. Specifically, the Super Bowl rejection campaign fundamentally misrepresented to 13 investors and potential investors the quality of the AML Bitcoin cryptocurrency and the financial 14 viability of the AML Bitcoin project. These misrepresentations go directly to the nature of the 15 bargain between investors and AML Bitcoin and are not unduly prejudicial; accordingly, 16 evidence of the Super Bowl rejection campaign should be admitted.

17 A. The Super Bowl Rejection Campaign Misrepresentations Go to the Nature of the 18 Bargain

19 The Super Bowl rejection campaign's misrepresentations go to the "nature of the 20 bargain" because they are misstatements that go to the "quality" of the AML Bitcoin product – 21 its cryptocurrency – and the "quality" of the company developing and supporting the product, 22 AML Bitcoin. Milheiser, 98 F.4th at 944. Misrepresentations about the security features built 23 into AML Bitcoin's cryptocurrency source code (also referred to as its blockchain) and the 24 financial strength of the company are each an "essential aspect" of investors' decision to invest 25 in AML Bitcoin by purchasing AML Bitcoin "tokens" that could be converted to the AML 26 Bitcoin cryptocurrency in the future. Id.

27 The indictment alleges that Andrade engaged in a scheme to defraud AML Bitcoin
 28 investors by disseminating false and misleading statements indicating that (1) AML Bitcoin
 29 cryptocurrency actually had biometric identity features built into its blockchain, and (2) AML

1 Bitcoin as a company was in a strong financial position because it had existing or impending
 2 business arrangements with potential business partners. Dkt. 1 ¶ 9. The Super Bowl rejection
 3 campaign misled investors and potential investors by representing that (1) AML Bitcoin 4 cryptocurrency had existing security features that even North Korea’s government could not 5 “hack,” and (2) AML Bitcoin as a company was so successful – presumably, through business 6 partnerships or cryptocurrency sales – that it could afford the approximately $5 million price of a 7 Super Bowl advertisement. These alleged misstatements go directly to the nature of the bargain 8 because, in the context of an investment fraud case, misstatements about what a product can do 9 and the financial viability of the company backing the product go to the “quality” of the product 10 and the business selling the product. Milheiser, 98 F.4th at 944 (explaining that “a large and 11 successful operation will inform the nature of the bargain—it is relevant information about the 12 value of the investor’s purchase”).

13 Andrade incorrectly analyzes Milheiser because he treats this case like a commodities 14 case rather than an investment fraud. How Milheiser applies depends on the type of transaction.
 15 See United States v. Rothenberg, Case No. 20-cr-266 JST (Order Denying Def.’s Mots. for New 16 Trial and Judgment of Acquittal) (Dkt. 395), at 6 (discussing and quoting Milheiser, 98 F. 4th at 17 944-45, in depth) (“Whether a misrepresentation goes to the nature of the bargain may depend on 18 the specific transaction at issue.”). In this investment fraud case, the government alleges that 19 Andrade’s misstatements about the AML Bitcoin cryptocurrency’s security features and the 20 company’s business relationships were material to investors considering whether to invest in 21 AML Bitcoin. Whereas in a commodities-based fraud case the size or value of a company 22 selling a commodity might not be material to the purchaser, in an investment fraud case, 23 “because investments are by nature speculative,” the size and success of a company offering an 24 investment goes to the nature of the bargain because “it is relevant information about the value of 25 the investor’s purchase.” Id. (quoting Milheiser, 98 F. 4th at 944-45). In making this point, 26 Milheiser looked to United States v. Tarallo, 380 F.3d 1174 (9th Cir. 2004), where the Court 27 ruled that materiality was satisfied with the following two false statements by the defendant: 28 “‘that the invested funds would be placed in a trust and would be safe there’ and that ‘he was in

1 an office in Washington, D.C.”” Rothenberg, Case No. 20-cr-266 JST (Dkt. 395), at 6 2 (discussing Milheiser and quoting Tarallo, 380 F.3d at 1182-83).

3 The false statements in Tarallo were material because they “influence[d] a potential 4 investor’s decision to invest, and a reasonable investor would find the level of risk to be 5 important in deciding whether to invest.” Id. (quoting Tarallo, 380 F.3d at 1182). Simply put, 6 defendant’s misrepresentations made “his operation seem bigger than it was.” Id. They “were 7 designed to give a false impression as to the size and nature of his own company.” Id. (quoting 8 Tarallo, 380 F.3d at 1182)).

9 So too here. The Super Bowl rejection campaign’s misstatements about the AML Bitcoin 10 cryptocurrency’s security features and the business’s financial strength were material because 11 they were capable of influencing a potential investor’s decision to invest and constituted 12 important information about the risk of investing in AML Bitcoin. Tarallo, 380 F.3d at 1182.
 13 Accordingly, the Super Bowl rejection campaign goes to the nature of the bargain and should be 14 admitted at trial.

15 B. Super Bowl Rejection Campaign Evidence is Admissible Under Rule 403

16 As discussed in detail above, evidence of the Super Bowl rejection campaign goes 17 directly to the quality of the AML Bitcoin investment – to both the cryptocurrency and the 18 financial strength of the company behind the cryptocurrency. Accordingly, such evidence is 19 relevant, and Andrade’s argument that Super Bowl rejection campaign evidence should be 20 excluded because it would be a waste of time is misplaced. Def. MILs, at 6. Relevant evidence 21 is not a waste of time. Nor will presentation of such evidence require significant trial time.
 22 Indeed, Andrade does not claim that such evidence will impermissibly lengthen the trial.
 23 Instead, the rejection campaign evidence goes directly to the elements the government is required 24 to prove beyond a reasonable doubt. Such evidence must be admitted.

25 Andrade’s argument that evidence of the Super Bowl rejection campaign would cause 26 unfair prejudice by luring the jury “into declaring guilt on a ground different from the proof 27 specific to the offense charged” is also unavailing. Id. (quoting United States v. Gonzalez- 28 Florez, 418 F.3d 1093, 1098 (9th Cir. 2005) (internal citation and quotation omitted)). As

1 described in detail above, Super Bowl rejection campaign evidence goes to materiality and the 2 nature of the bargain – both are elements of the offense.

3 The Court should deny Andrade’s Motion in Limine No. 1.

4 II. Defense Motion in Limine No. 2: The Court Should Deny Defendant’s Motion to Exclude 5 Victim Testimony Because It Is “Clearly Admissible”

6 A mountain of precedent forecloses Andrade’s motion to exclude all victim testimony. A fraud 7 victim’s testimony is “clearly admissible” because it is “highly probative of the fraudulent scheme” 8 charged in the indictment. United States v. Van Cauwenberghe, 827 F.2d 424, 432 (9th Cir. 1987); see 9 also, e.g., United States v. Saavedra, 684 F.2d 1293, 1297 (9th Cir. 1982) (affirming admission of fraud 10 victim testimony and rejecting hearsay challenge to their testimony on misrepresentations made by 11 unidentified declarants). The testimony of fraud victims “is more than ‘inextricably intertwined’ with 12 the crime charged—it is of a piece with the crime charged.” United States v. Wineman, 60 F. App’x 73, 13 77 (9th Cir. 2003) (emphasis in original).

14 Indeed, the Ninth Circuit Model Jury Instruction on wire fraud requires the jury to find that the 15 defendant “deceive[d] the victim about the nature of the bargain.” Ninth Circuit Model Jury Instruction 16 No. 15.35 (revised June 2024). Thus, victim testimony can hardly be “unfair” under Rule 403, let alone 17 result in unfair prejudice that substantially outweighs the strong probative value of the testimony.

18 Wineman, 60 F. App’x at 77. That is especially true where, as here, victim-investors would testify that 19 they would not have invested but for affirmative misrepresentations or material omissions. See, e.g., 20 United States v. Lloyd, 807 F.3d 1128, 1153 (9th Cir. 2015) (affirming testimony of victim investors who 21 testified that “they would not have invested had they known about the [sales] commissions” paid).

22 What’s more, a fraud victim’s testimony is admissible even when he or she is “not specifically 23 mentioned in the indictment.” United States v. Jalloh, 787 F. App’x 409, 410 (9th Cir. 2019); accord, 24 e.g., United States v. Baggett, 129 F.3d 128, at *3 (9th Cir. 1997) (unpublished) (affirming admission 25 testimony from “victims not named in the indictment” that defendant had solicited money from victims 26 and victims were unhappy with what they received in return); United States v. Taylor, 832 F.2d 1187, 27 1197 (10th Cir. 1987) (rejecting defendant’s argument that victim testimony “resulted in a cumulative 28 ‘parade of horribles (not found in the indictment) with lots of victims, losing lots and lots of money’”).

1 Such testimony is powerful proof that the defendant devised a scheme to defraud, that his statements and 2 omissions were material, that he intended to deceive and cheat. After all, “the purpose of the scheme 3 ‘must be to injure, which doubtless may be inferred when the scheme has such effect as a necessary
 4 result of carrying it out.’ Of course, proof that someone was actually victimized by the fraud is good 5 evidence of the schemer’s intent.” United States v. Reid, 533 F.2d 1255, 1264 n.34 (D.C. Cir. 1976)
 6 (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting United States v. Regent Office Supply Company, 421 F.2d 7 1174, 1180-81 (2d Cir. 1970), and collecting cases).

8 Andrade cites one case where admitting victim testimony was error, but its inaptness is stark.
 9 See Def. MILs, at 15 (citing United States v. Gonzalez-Flores, 418 F.3d 1093, 1098 (9th Cir. 2005)). In 10 Gonzalez-Flores, an alien smuggling case, the Ninth Circuit held that the trial court should not have 11 admitted testimony that two young girls suffered life-threatening heat stroke—so life-threatening, in 12 fact, that both required an airlift to a hospital and one “required resuscitation by rescue breathing.” 418 13 F.3d at 1099. But the Ninth Circuit still affirmed the conviction because, in any event, the error was 14 “undeniably” harmless. Id. at 1102. Gonzalez-Flores has no bearing on Andrade’s prosecution for wire 15 fraud and money laundering; the government does not argue that he endangered children’s life or limb.

16 The Court should therefore deny Andrade’s MIL #2 and permit Andrade’s victims to testify.

17 III. Defense Motion in Limine No. 3: The Court Should Deny Defendant’s Motion to Exclude 18 Misrepresentations to Non-Purchasers Because Andrade’s Scheme Encompassed Broad 19 Misrepresentations and Any Such Exclusion Would Require Mini-Trials

20 Similarly meritless is Andrade’s motion to exclude all argument and evidence of 21 “misrepresentations that go beyond the scheme of lying to purchasers that is alleged in the indictment.” 22 Def. MILs, at 17. This Court has rightly recognized that wire fraud “does not require that the 23 misrepresentation be directly uttered to the victim.” United States v. Barama, No. 19-CR-00463-RS-2, 24 2023 WL 2530994, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2023). Indeed, in reversing the exclusion of uncharged 25 fraud evidence, the Ninth Circuit has explained that “the commission of a mail fraud or wire fraud 26 offense necessarily includes a fraudulent scheme as a whole, including additional executions of the 27 scheme that were not specifically charged.” United States v. Loftis, 843 F.3d 1173, 1177 (9th Cir. 2016) 28 (quoting United States v. Lo, 839 F.3d 777, 793 (9th Cir. 2016)). As noted in the response above to Andrade’s MIL #2, evidence of harm or misrepresentations “not specifically mentioned in the 1 “indictment” is still admissible. Jalloh, 787 F. App’x at 410. That is because “[w]hen an indictment 2 alleges a general scheme, ‘evidence of uncharged transactions is not evidence of ‘other’ crimes or acts

 3 under Rule 404(b), because it is evidence of part of the crime charged in the indictment—the overall 4 scheme to defraud.’” Id. (emphasis in original) (quoting Loftis, 843 F.3d at 1176). Simply put, “to 5 demonstrate that a defendant employed a ‘device, scheme or artifice’ or made a material misstatement or 6 mission, the Government ‘is not restricted solely to isolated misrepresentations or omissions.’” United 7 States v. Schena, No. 5:20-CR-00425-EJD-1, 2022 WL 2910185, at *11 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2022)
 8 (quoting United States v. Ellison, 704 F. App’x 616, 619 (9th Cir. 2017), and collecting cases).

9 Adopting defendant’s MIL would also be unworkable. Andrade and his co-conspirators devised
 10 a scheme that encompassed more than just defrauding Purchaser-1. Their fraudulent misrepresentations 11 spanned several years and various channels, including social media, the press, personalized emails, text 12 messages, phone calls, and more. Andrade and his co-conspirators made these misrepresentations to a 13 slew of actual and potential victim-purchasers. The speaking indictment put Andrade on notice more 14 than four years ago that the government would introduce evidence of this comprehensive scheme. See, 15 e.g., Dkt. 1 ¶ 9(a) (“public statements and statements to potential purchasers of AML Bitcoin”).
 16 Andrade’s MIL would require, contrary to the precedent above and the indictment itself, that the Court 17 must find that each misrepresentation was actually heard by an actual purchaser—creating the very 18 “minitrial” problem that the defense purports to prevent. Def. MILs, at 18. The Court should instead 19 deny Andrade’s MIL #3 and “permit the prosecutor to offer a coherent and comprehensible story 20 regarding the commission of the crime.” Loftis, 843 F.3d at 1178.

21 IV. Defense Motion in Limine No. 4: The Court Should Deny Defendant’s Motion to Exclude 22 Relevant Evidence of Andrade’s Failure to File Tax Returns

23 Andrade incorrectly argues that the Court should exclude evidence of his failure to file tax 24 returns because Federal Rules of Evidence 404(b) and 403 preclude the government from introducing 25 such evidence. The Court should deny his motion.

26 Evidence that Andrade failed to file tax returns during his involvement in the fraud scheme is 27 admissible because it is inextricably intertwined with his participation in the scheme. See, e.g., United 28 States v. Finn, Case No. 13-cr-439-KJD-VCF, 2020 WL 376644, at *3 (D. Nev. Jan. 23, 2020) (unpubl.)

1 (admitting, in wire fraud case, evidence that defendant failed to file tax returns during his involvement 2 with the fraud scheme because the failure to file was “inextricably intertwined” with his participation in 3 the scheme).

4 First, Andrade’s failure to file a tax return while he was engaged in the alleged cryptocurrency 5 fraud scheme “is intrinsic evidence that [he] received illegitimate payments from a fraudulent scheme.”
 6 Id. The government intends to introduce evidence that Andrade and his company, the National Aten
 7 Coin (NAC) Foundation, received approximately $6.8 million from investors who purchased Aten Coin 8 and AML Bitcoin cryptocurrency from 2014 through 2018. The government also intends to introduce 9 evidence that Andrade transferred approximately $2.4 million in investor money to his personal bank 10 accounts. And the government intends to introduce evidence that Andrade failed to file personal tax 11 returns for 2016, 2017, and 2018, and failed to file tax returns for the NAC Foundation from 2014 12 through 2018.

13 The basis for the wire fraud and money laundering charges against Andrade is that he induced 14 investment into AML Bitcoin based on false and misleading statements, profited from those 15 investments, and concealed his ill-gotten gains through financial transactions. “Failure to report ill-16 gotten gains is a component of the overall fraud scheme even if the defendant is not charged with tax 17 evasion.” Id. (citing United States v. Taylor, 239 F.3d 994, 999-1000 (9th Cir. 2005)).

18 Put differently, Andrade’s failure to file tax returns is “inextricably intertwined with the charged 19 offense” because it is “part of the transaction that serves as the basis for the criminal charge and is vital 20 to the prosecution’s ability to offer a coherent and comprehensive story regarding the commission of the 21 crime.” Id. (quoting United States v. Anderson, 741 F.3d 938, 949 (9th Cir. 2013)). Accordingly, 22 evidence that Andrade failed to file tax returns during the alleged fraud scheme is “independently 23 admissible and … exempt from the requirements of Rule 404(b).” Id.

24 Alternatively, Andrade’s failure to file his taxes shows consciousness of guilt under Rule 404(b).
 25 Andrade’s company, the NAC Foundation collected approximately $6.8 million from Aten Coin and 26 AML Bitcoin investors. Andrade transferred a significant percentage of that money – $2.4 million – to 27 himself. He bought two houses and two vehicles with investor money. But Andrade did not report that 28 income to the IRS. “The lack of tax returns is probative of [Andrade]’s intent to conceal his income.”

1 Id. at 4.

2 Rule 404(b)(2) permits evidence of other bad acts when offered for the purpose of proving intent.
 3 Fed. R. Crim. P. 404(b)(2). Here, evidence that Andrade failed to file taxes during the alleged fraud
 4 scheme is admissible because (i) sufficient evidence of Andrade’s failure to file taxes during the relevant 5 years exists for the jury to find that he failed to file taxes, (ii) Andrade’s failure to file taxes proves 6 intent to conceal the gains of his fraud scheme, (iii) the failure to file tax returns occurred 7 contemporaneously with the fraud scheme, and (iv) Andrade’s failure to file taxes is similar to the 8 charged fraud scheme in that both are premised on deception and concealing the truth for financial gain.
 9 See United States v. Bradley, 5 F.3d 1317, 1320 (9th Cir. 1993) (explaining the standard for admitting 10 404(b)(2) evidence).

11 Andrade’s claim that evidence of his failure to file tax returns should be excluded because it is 12 more prejudicial than probative is similarly incorrect. Courts exclude relevant evidence “if its probative 13 value is substantially outweighed by a danger of … unfair prejudice.” Federal Rule of Evidence 403.
 14 Accordingly, as the probative value of evidence increases, “the danger of unfair prejudice must also rise 15 to substantially outweigh the probative value.” Finn, 2020 WL 376644, at *4. Andrade argues that 16 Rule 403 prohibits evidence of Andrade’s failure to file tax returns because such evidence is not 17 probative and even if probative would confuse the jury and waste trial time. Def. MILs, at 14. But these 18 risks are essentially non-existent. Andrade’s failure to file is evidence that he was intentionally hiding 19 his ill-gotten gains. Presentation of such evidence will take only minimal time. And such evidence will 20 not confuse the jury because failure to file evidence is clearly related to intent to conceal fraud proceeds.
 21 Put simply, “these risks do not substantially outweigh the probative value of [Andrade]’s intent to conceal 22 his income from the investment scheme.” Finn, 2020 WL 376644, at *4. “As a result, Rule 403 does 23 not exclude the evidence of [Andrade]’s failure to file tax returns.” Id.

24 Finally, Andrade’s reliance on United States v. Neuman, 621 Fed. Appx. 363, 365 (9th Cir.
 25 2015), is entirely misplaced. In Neuman, the district court denied defendants’ attempt to introduce 26 evidence of an IRS audit of their business tax returns. Id. Excluding defendant’s evidence of the tax 27 audit was proper because it was irrelevant to the wire fraud and money laundering charges. Id.
 28 Presumably, the defendants in Neuman wanted to demonstrate that their company had passed an IRS

1 audit, and the Court precluded such evidence because the issue was not whether the defendants had 2 committed tax fraud. Here, on the other hand, the government seeks to offer evidence of Andrade's 3 failure to file tax returns to show that he knowledge of ill-gotten gains and intent to conceal them. Such 4 evidence is admissible under Rule 403. Finn, 2020 WL 376644, at *4.

5 V. Defense Motion in Limine No. 5: The Court Should Deny Defendant's Motion to Exclude 6 Relevant Evidence of Andrade's Lawsuits Against Disgruntled Investors and Employees

7 Andrade seeks to block witness testimony related to civil lawsuits. The government intends to 8 introduce the existence of three types of civil lawsuits: (1) by disgruntled investors against Andrade for 9 his false and misleading statements related to AML Bitcoin, (2) by Andrade against disgruntled 10 investors to dissuade them from going to authorities and law enforcement with complaints about 11 Andrade's investment scheme, and (3) by Andrade against his employee, Melissa Foteh, to stop her 12 from complaining about Andrade to authorities. Andrade asserts that the danger of unfair prejudice 13 substantially outweighs any probative value of such evidence. Because an investor's decision to sue, the 14 impact of Andrade's civil suit preventing an investor from going to authorities or taking legal action
 15 against Andrade, and the timing of such suits all bears directly on the materiality of Andrade's 16 misrepresentations and omissions—an element the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt—the 17 Court should reject this attempt to limit investor testimony. The Court can provide limiting 18 instructions to the jury to prevent any potential prejudice.

19 To start, Andrade's lawsuits against his victims and former associates show his efforts to deter 20 reporting of his scheme to law enforcement and the public. Indeed, Andrade boasted about his use of 21 litigation as a cudgel against SEC and FBI investigation. In April 2018, for example, Abramoff 22 messaged Andrade: "Got a call from one of the pre-ICO s [sic] that coin holders online are planning to 23 go to SEC and FBI about us. I'll get the info from him when he gets to his office. Have you heard 24 this?" Trial Ex. 951 (excerpt of WhatsApp chats on from Abramoff's phone). Andrade replied: "We 25 know who it is, already have a lawsuit on him. [...] Default Judgment[.]" Id. Similarly, in February 26 2018—a day after NBC announced that AML Bitcoin's Super Bowl ad "wasn't rejected because it was 27 never reviewed"¹—Andrade wanted to sue. "Dammit Jack, we need to release. The letter and the proof

1 and threaten a lawsuit against NBC,” Andrade messaged Abramoff. Trial Ex. 940. Abramoff replied: “a 2 lawsuit based on what? [...] Marcus, we really need to do this as a conversation not texting.” Id.

3 “An attempt by a criminal defendant to suppress evidence is probative of consciousness of guilt 4 and admissible on that basis.” United States v. Castillo, 615 F.2d 878, 885 (9th Cir. 1980). And a 5 defendant’s attempts to intimidate others “into withholding information from the FBI [] shows 6 consciousness of guilt—second only to a confession in terms of probative value.” United States v.
 7 Meling, 47 F.3d 1546, 1557 (9th Cir. 1995). To this day, several victims the government has 8 subpoenaed to testify fear that Andrade will sue or otherwise retaliate against them for their testimony.
 9 These fears are not speculative: Andrade even sued Purchaser-1 after Purchaser-1 reported Andrade’s 10 scheme to the FBI.

11 In addition, the fact that victims have sued Andrade is also admissible. For one thing, a victim’s 12 lawsuit against the defendant is probative of her credibility, because it tends to show that Andrade’s 13 misrepresentations were material and harmed the victim. See United States v. Clark, 649 F.2d 534, 543 14 (7th Cir. 1981) (affirming victim’s testimony on her civil lawsuit against criminal fraud defendants 15 because “[t]he fact of the lawsuit was properly admitted on the issue of credibility”). For another, the 16 lawsuits are intertwined with the course of the scheme, so that the fact of witnesses’ lawsuits against 17 defendant are “necessary to complete the story of the crime on trial.” United States v. Sutherland, 921 18 F.3d 421, 430 (4th Cir. 2019) (affirming admission of witness’s lawsuit against defendant); see also, e.g., 19 United States v. Cloud, 680 F.3d 396, 402 (4th Cir. 2012) (collecting cases holding that “victim-impact 20 testimony” is admissible in fraud cases).

21 To be clear, the government does not seek to admit judicial filings, such as a civil complaint, or 22 evidence of the outcome of these proceedings in its case-in-chief. Rather, the government anticipates 23 testimony by: investors for whom Andrade’s misstatements were material such that they filed a civil suit
 24 against him, investors who did not report Andrade to legal authorities or take legal action against him 25 because Andrade filed a civil suit against them first, and an employee who did not report Andrade to 26 legal authorities because he had sued her first. Such testimony is relevant as it establishes the

1 materiality of Andrade's statements and omissions. Fed. R. Evid. 401. Under the Ninth Circuit Model 2 Criminal Jury Instruction, "statements made or facts omitted as part of the scheme were material... if 3 they had a natural tendency to influence, or were capable of influencing a person to part with money or 4 property." Ninth Cir. Model Crim. Jury Instr. 15.35 (Wire Fraud). Testimony indicating that investors 5 took legal action because of Andrade's false and misleading statements shows that Andrade's words
 6 influenced these individuals. See United States v. Anderson, Pretrial Conf. Order, No. 21-cr-397 EMC 7 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2023) (Dkt. 64), at 5-6 (denying defense motion to exclude evidence of civil 8 litigation between investor-victims and defendant because civil suits were evidence of materiality).

9 Under Federal Rule of Evidence 403, relevant evidence may be excluded if the probative value is 10 substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice..." (emphasis added). As noted, the 11 government will not elicit testimony regarding the outcome of these civil actions. To the extent the 12 Court finds it necessary, a limiting instruction can be provided to the jury admonishing them that the 13 result of any civil proceeding is not to be considered and they should refrain from researching any civil 14 cases involving the Defendant and the witnesses. This would diminish the potential for prejudice and 15 certainly under Rule 403, the probative value would not be significantly outweighed by unfair prejudice 16 with the tailored scope of the anticipated testimony.

17 The government will not admit the civil suits themselves or discuss the merits of the civil suits
 18 with witnesses. The trial will not revolve around the civil suits, nor will the trial devolve into mini-trials 19 about the merits of the civil litigation. Similarly, witness testimony about Andrade's frequent litigation 20 will not unduly prejudice the jury into believing Andrade was a bad person. Rather, testimony that 21 Andrade sued disgruntled investors to stop them from going to authorities, that disgruntled investors 22 took the step of suing Andrade, and that Andrade sued a disgruntled employee is evidence both of 23 materiality and Andrade's consciousness of the scheme to defraud in trying to block investors from 24 going to authorities through preemptive legal action.

25 VI. Defense Motion in Limine No. 6: The Court Should Deny Defendant's Motion to Exclude 26 Evidence of Market Manipulation

27 In his sixth MIL, Andrade moves to exclude evidence of his efforts to "manipulate the price or 28 volume of the AML Bitcoin token on cryptocurrency exchanges" on the ground that "it is not probative

1 of any material point in this case.” Def. MILs, at 24–26. To state his argument is to refute it. “A 2 deception about the market value of a commodity that was intended to cause the victim to pay an 3 inflated price would go to the nature of the bargain and therefore could be a basis for a fraud 4 conviction,” as the Ninth Circuit recently stressed. Milheiser, 98 F.4th at 945 n.7.

5 Here, Andrade intended to inflate the market value of AML Bitcoin by paying individuals to 6 trade it on exchanges at artificially inflated prices—classic “market making” or “pump and dump.”
 7 Andrade himself put it well. In WhatsApp messages in May 2018, for example, Abramoff wrote 8 Andrade, “our price is dropping rather rapidly. any ideas?” Andrade reassured him that although 9 “people were selling off,” “[a]s soon as Market-making kicks in will be good to go [sic] [...] First we’re 10 hitting Asia [...] Just please get me the pr from your side.” Trial Ex. 952 (excerpt from Abramoff’s 11 phone, Bates FBI-00123203).

12 A couple weeks later, Abramoff conveyed Andrade’s directions to John Bryan, writing: “OK, I 13 had a chance to review things with Marcus. [...] you will have a budget of $250,000 to effect a 14 significant change in volume, and more importantly, the price of the token. He expects that you will 15 need to use a portion of that for purchasing, but he leaves it to you to do what you need to market 16 properly.” U.S. Mot. to Admit Co-Conspirator Statements, Dkt. 449 at 23–24 (Ex. 902). Bryan got to 17 the point: “i just did a trade with myself at [...] $.95[.] i bought and i sold it to show some volume [...] i 18 pushed it from $.73 to $.95 on BTC pair[.]” Ex. 902 (emphasis added). In short, after the October 2017
 19 ICO failed to meet expectations, Andrade still sought to misrepresent AML Bitcoin as a popular 20 cryptocurrency in high demand. This “market making,” in the defendant’s own words, was intended to 21 mislead investors that AML Bitcoin had broader adoption and legitimacy than it did—and thus that they 22 should buy the token at an inflated price befitting its purportedly high public valuation and trading 23 volume.

24 Andrade again protests that Rule 404(b) excludes vast swaths of his fraudulent conduct, 25 including his efforts to inflate the perceived price and liquidity of the AML Bitcoin token. Def. MILs, at 26 26–27. But precedent forecloses this argument, as detailed above in responses to MILs #2 and 3. “It [is] 27 ‘not necessary to consider whether the evidence [is] admissible as other crimes evidence under Rule 28 404(b),’ even when ‘none of [the evidence on fraudulent transactions] was alleged in the indictment.’”

1 Loftis, 843 F.3d at 1176–77 (quoting United States v. Smith, 685 F.2d 1293, 1296 (11th Cir. 1982)).
 2 Evidence of uncharged transactions, like market manipulation, relates to the evidence of a scheme. And 3 in any event, the market manipulation evidence here is largely within the charged wire fraud period, 4 which runs through at least October 2018. Courts admit even less blatant market manipulation evidence
 5 in fraud cases. See, e.g., United States v. Merriam, 68 F. App'x 840, 841–42 (9th Cir. 2003) (affirming 6 admission of expert testimony on “typical role of an issuer”—such as the defendant—“in a ‘pump and 7 dump’ fraud scheme”); United States v. Norris, 513 F. App'x 57, 60 (2d Cir. 2013) (affirming admission 8 of evidence that defendant orchestrated wire transfers to feign investment in a business he was selling).
 9 The Court should deny Andrade’s MIL #6.

10 VII. Defense Motion in Limine No. 7: The Court Should Grant Defendant’s Motion to Prevent 11 ██████████ from Self-Diagnosing PTSD But Should Not Preclude Her From Testifying 12 About Andrade’s Management Style, Treatment of Employees, and Leadership of the NAC 13 Foundation

14 The government agrees that the Court should exclude testimony from ██████████ regarding 15 her self-diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder and/or other medical and psychological conditions 16 due to her time working for Andrade at the NAC Foundation.

17 However, ██████████ should be permitted to testify regarding Andrade’s conduct as the founder,
 18 CEO, and owner of the NAC Foundation. And she should be permitted to testify regarding Andrade’s 19 management style and control over the NAC Foundation. The government expects ██████████ to testify 20 that Andrade controlled the NAC Foundation, its finances, its website, and its press releases, many of 21 which were related to Aten Coin and AML Bitcoin. Such evidence is highly relevant, and the defense 22 does not seek to exclude it.
